THREATENED GRASSY WOODLANDS

Indigenous Values

Are you interested in the Indigenous Culture associated with Box Gum Grassy Woodlands?

Would you like to know more about Indigenous bush food, Heritage legislation or speak to someone from your local Indigenous community?

Box Gum Grassy Woodlands are an important landscape to Indigenous people.

They provide resources such as food, plant materials for making implements and are a source of stone for making stone tools.

Programs are being developed to increase community knowledge and skills in these areas. If you are interested in learning more about the Indigenous use of these endangered habitats please contact your Indigenous Liaison Officer in your local North East Catchment Management Authority.

Richard Kennedy
Indigenous Landcare Officer
North East CMA
(02) 6043 7600
richard.kennedy@necma.vic.gov.au

Pictured clockwise from top left: (a) Stone flake, (b) Indigenous values field day Yackandandah Landcare Group, (c) Chocolate Lily (bush food), (d) Varnish wattle (food source), (e) Stone chopper, (f) Kangaroo Grass (bush food), (g) Scarred tree, (h) Bulbine Lily (bush food).

Photos (a, b, d, e, f, g) R McTernan North East CMA. Photos (c, h) Mary Tlicumb DSE Wedonga